To Jove at length the goldens soared,
Most miserable crying,
"Oh, save my son, Heaven's mighty 'Lord!
The God of Love is dying!"
"To earth," said Jove, "once more repair,
And cease your cries and weeping;
A friendly leech will meet you there,
Who'll cure Love's over-sleeping.

Venus flew back; the boy was free;
For Jove, on special mission
Had sent him green-eyed Jealousy,
Juno's own state physician.
The cure, much worse than the disease,
Olympus shook with laughter;
For Love was never at his ease,
And never slumbered after.

[JOHN SHERMAN, in Temple Bar. LOVE AND HOPE.

"A queen of hearts." Such was the name the admirers of Estelle Glyndon had given to her, and, petted and praised for her grace and beauty as she had always been, it was hardly to be wondered at that the girl had come to the age of eighteen with conviction that not for her were the trials of life.

As she stands now, beneath the shade of the old oak which guards her favorite seat, the most casual observer could not help but pronounce her rarely beautiful. But the lovely mouth is marred by a hauty expression, as with averted head she listens coldly to the young man by

It is Douglass Macdonald, and in earnest tones he is speaking thus:

"Oh, Estelle, can it be that I have deceived myself in thinking that you cared for me? Ar.' all this summer, in which I have been foolishly happy, have you only been playing with me? It cannot be true; you cannot be so heartless! I have been told that Foster Severne is the fabeen told that Poster Severne is the favored suiter who has superseded me; but I said that until you confirm it with your own lips I would not believe it. Oh, my darling, whom I love more than life, do not be so cold 1 Look up Estelle, and tell me it is false!"

China. You do not love me-my choice is made. This will be my last farewell.

He grasped her hand, wrung it; then without waiting for answering words, turned and left her. Bhe watched his tall form till it passed out of sight. Then suddenly, with a lightning flash, the knowledge of what she had done came to her, and realized that in rejecting Dong-lass Macdonald's love she had wrecked beyond retrieval the happiness of her

That evening we see her in the midst of a fashionable throng. As he looks down at the woman on his arm, Eoster Severne's heart leaps triumphantiy as he thinks how proud he will be when he can call her his own! As it by accident, he leads her to the conservatory where and leads her to the conservatory, where, amid the splash of fountain and the fragrance of flowers, he can speak undisturbedly. There once more he offers her his hand and heart—all that is left of it—and, never doubting what it will be, awaits his there, older and graver than she remembered him, but still the same, stood Douglas Macdonald!

"Estelle!" he cried, "my darling! I came to seek you, and I have found you already! Oh, tell me that I am welcome—that you are glad to see me. I only very lately heard of your refusing Mr. Severne and of your misfortures. Then in my heart a faint hope sprang into existence, and I determine to return and seek you and try once mine to return and seek you and try once

It is Douglass Macdonald, and in earnest tones he is speaking thus:

A with averted head who was the fashionable, heartless girl who refused your boy's true heart," said Estelle, softly to old Mrs. Stewart, as the happy group of four were drawn together happy group of four were drawn together. happy group of four were drawn together about the lamp that evening; "but you will forgive her, I am sure, when she promises that henceforth that boy's happiness shall be her foremost care, and that she will try to the utmost of her power, to repay him for the pain which, through her foolish, wicked pride, she once caused him to suffer."

PHILADELPHIA'S POPULATION,—The census of Philadelphia just published by the department of the interior affords some interesting points of comparison Estelle hesitated. Only the previous day another had laid his heart at her feet and with it the richest fortune in all the country round.

She had not given her answer, but in her young heart pride was very strong and she felt that to be mistress of The Elms would be an enviable position.

Douglass eagerly watching her expressive features, conjectured her thoughts.

"I see!" he exclaimed; "it was true—the report I heard. You intend to marry Foster Severne—dissipated man of the world though he be—simply because he is rich in this world's goods! I came to ask you a question upon which a great deal depends. Two openings are before me—one to settle in an honorable position in my native town; the other to go abroad, far away to the distant land of China. You do not love me—my choice is made. This will he me—my choice is med. This will he me—my choice is med. This will he me her tests of the the total population with New York. The total population of Philadelphia is $46,980, or 359,597 less than that of New York. The first and most striking difference between the two cities is in the more even and consequently more healthy and comfortable distribution of the population over the entire area of the city. New York has twenty-four wards with varying population of from 1,608 to 158,108. Philadelphia has thirty-three wards, in none of which is the population extremely a population of the population of the two cities is not misrepresented by the above figures.

The next point of contrast is in the relative proportion of natives and foreign-relative proportion of natives and foreigners. In New York the foreign element composes 40 per cent, of the entire population, while in Philadephia it is only 25 lation, while in Philadephia it is only 25 per cent. The negro population of Philadelphia is 31,699, or more than that of New York, although it is still a triffe at compared with the total population, heing less than 4 per cent. The negroes mostly live together in settlements or "negro quarters," as they are called, the largest being in the Seventh ward, where 7,000 of these people as haddled been settlements or "negro quarters," as they are called, the largest being in the Seventh ward, where rangest being in the Seventh ward, where 7,000 of these people are huddled together. In the better portions of the city very few are to be found, and in the Eighteenth ward, with nearly 30,000 inhabitants, there are only 13 negroes, and in the Thirty-first ward, with 31,000, there are only 15. The excess of females over males in Philadelphia is 10 per cent., while in New York it is only 5 per cent.

GEORGIA'S ELECTORAL VOTE LOST.— The vote for President was cast on the 1st instant, according to the laws of the United States, except by the Georgia elec-tors. The Revised Statutes of the United States require the Electoral Colleges to assemble on the first Wednesday in De-cember and cast their vote. The law of An angry flush springs to the young man's face.

"Miss Glyndon, you cannot mean what you say! Think a little longer! You surely do not mean to refuse such a position as I can give you?"

If Estelle has been fearful that she will cause him pain, all such idea is swept away by his words, and she cannot help comparing him to the lover who in her false pride she rejected.

When she reached home Estelle is called upon to bear another trial. Truly the

When she reached home Estelle is called upon to bear another trial. Truly the day has been a hard one for the girl upon whom hitherto the winds have rot-been suffered to blow so roughly.

"So you have released Foster Severne, when you know it was the dearest, wish of my heart that you should become his wife? Then let me tell you that in doing so you have doomed hothly our falter a utility of my heart that you should become his wife? Then let me tell you that in doing so you have doomed hothly our falter a utility of the penury. I am a ruined man For a year pass I have seen the crash approaching, and it is even now at hand. Estelle, there is yet time, retract your rofusal, become Mr. Severne's wife, and all will be saved."

Estelle trembled as her father's words, first angry and then imploring, fell upon her eais.

"Father, I cannot." It would be a sin were Ito marry him, for I love another."

With an angry gesture, Mr. Glyndom made a step forward; then, with an exclamation, he raised his hand to his head staggered, and then fell to the floor.

Poor Estelle! Bitter were the days that followed! On the very eve of his. staggered, and then fell to the floor.

Poor Estelle! Bitter were the days that followed! On the very eve of his failure her father was stricken with paralysis, and before long the girl found herself homeless and almost penniless.

After the first clock bad passed, then the noble nature that had slumbered quiescent so long in Estelle Glyndon's soul sprang to the surface. Steadily refusing all offers of assistance, she set herself unflinehingly amid the ranks of the world's workers. It was easier to obtain employment in the neighboring city than in their own small town, and to the city Estelle went.

Another week went by, one morning, with a beaming face, old Doctor Stewart came into the room where his wife and Estelle were sitting.

"What do you think, wife?—our boy is coming home! He will be here this week. Isn't their news."

Tears of joy worning it the clid lide's eyes.

"My dear boy! how glad I shall be to see him?"

When her bushand had left the room him. Stewart explained to Estelle that it was her dead brother's son, who was as dearly loved by her husband and herrelf as though he had been their dwn; who was thus eagerly expected.

"It was a sad blow to us when he went so far away," she concluded, "and what made it sadder still was that the noble had carried with him a heart full of pain. Some fashionable beauty had betwitched him, and then had deliberately crushed out his happiness. But I hope and trust he will return cured of his heart woun!.

We take pleasure in saying that 11 ° S. S. is giving good satisfaction. We have had excellent results from a number of cases. One gentleman, who had been confined to his bed six necks with Sphillitle Rheumatism, has been cared entirely, and speaks in the highest praise of it. It also acts well in primary as in secondary and tertiary cases. CHILES & BERRY.
